

„At first sight, it may seem that the word “discrimination“ refers to something of an external source. However, I define discrimination as a way that I encounter myself.

Sometimes I choose discrimination intentionally or subconsciously.

I highlight my limitations and deprivations, make a beautiful fence, and look at the outside world through my safe zone.

The safe zone is right here behind this beautiful window with foliage and trees.

I stand on the other side of the fence and choose to look at the promised land from here.

Sometimes, it takes only one step to go to the other side of the window!

but this view and frame is so nice and peaceful that I lose my determination to get out of my safe zone.

In fact, there is no difference between the trees and foliage of the window and the land. There is no “outside“ and “inside“.

What defines “discrimination“ is the fence that we create for ourselves ...“
